Dear Parents,

As we begin a new academic year, I extend warm greetings to the entire Columban family. I wish our students, parents, and all stakeholders a fruitful and productive year ahead, and I pray that everyone is blessed with good health and well-being.

At St. Columba's School, we believe that education is a shared responsibility. A strong partnership between school and home is essential in shaping our children into responsible, compassionate, and confident individuals. Together, we must guide them not merely towards academic success, but towards character formation, discipline, and resilience.

Education is not about ensuring immediate comfort; it is about preparing our children for the future. We must encourage them to embrace challenges, develop perseverance, and grow in independence. As Columbans, respect for every person and for everything around us must remain central to our daily lives.

In today's world of rapid information and social media influence, we also urge our students to seek truth and think critically, rather than relying on fleeting online trends. Developing integrity and discernment will help them become responsible citizens.

Let us work together to nurture students who strive for excellence, uphold Columban values, and contribute positively to society.

Wishing all our Columbans a meaningful and successful academic year ahead.

With every good wish,

Br. Robert Fernandes
